TOP TEN POSTS OF THE YEAR

Posted on December 27, 2011 by Eddie

Category: Observations

A number of blogs are posting a list of their top ten posts of the year, and always desperate for ideas, I've decided to do the same thing. You can see the ranked list of our top posts below (I have not included visits to the home page). What is interesting in this list is that very few of the posts were written in the last year and some of them go back four or five years. For the most part, people have come across these posts on search engines; presumably while either looking for something else, or while looking for background information on a subject. It is interesting that many of the top posts don't reflect the main thread of content on this blog: cross-cultural mission and Bible translation.

I'm not sure what conclusions, if any, can be drawn from this exercise, but it would be interesting to know what our readers (all four of them) think are the top posts of the year and also to get an idea of what you would like us to write about in future.

- Top Ten Missionary Books
- Listen to the Patois Bible
- Steve Jobs did not Change the World, but Bill Gates Might
- Twins: Who is the Oldest?
- Â Is the Term 'Missionary' Past Its Sell By Date?
- The Situation in Ivory Coast
- The Worst Worship Songs Ever
- The Lexham English Bible
- The Jamaican Bible Translation and Justice
- Â Meaning and the Son of God