Category: Church: World

For a while now, I've been looking for a good balanced article that would help with understanding the "Lakeland Revival". Today, thanks to a link from Hamo, I came across this excellent piece by Jason Clark.

> By way of method, Iâ€™m not going to deal with them directly. I donâ€™t want to offer an assessment or critique of Todd Bentley and/or John Crowder. Instead what I want to offer is how I plan on navigating this movement, and the next one that comes along...

> 1. The Body of Christ is Broad: I can enjoy something of God in many different kinds of churches, but I wouldnâ€™t want to make my church home there, nor do I have to.
> 2. Values: There are values within my church, and denomination of not hyping, not manipulating, not pumping people up. If God does something, great! If not, we donâ€™t whip people up into a frenzy.

The same issue of Next Wave has a good article on the word Missional by Andrew Jones.
