WORLD CHRISTIANITY IN WESTERN EUROPE

Posted on August 5, 2020 by Eddie

Christianity in Europe is no longer a purely European phenomenon. This 40 minute interview gives some insights into what God is doing in Europe today.
Category: Observations

Having posted a couple of things about getting to know the world church, it seems appropriate to show this video from Missio Africanus, which discusses a new book by Israel Olofinjana.

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Zxyhb6TgnII&feature=youtu.be

ABOUT THE BOOK: World Christianity in Western Europe: Diasporic Identity, Narratives & Missiology

Christianity is a world religion with about 2.3 billion Christians. While World Christianity with its attention on the explosive growth of Christianity in Africa, Asia, Latin America, the Pacific and Oceania is definitely significant, it is also important to consider World Christianity as it is developing in Europe. This book investigates this phenomenon in Western Europe through the prisms of Diasporic Identity, migrant narratives and their mission theology. It considers the complex Christian identity of people migrating to Europe, their stories and mission praxis. Here is a book including contributors who are scholars and practitioners. These scholars and practitioners are Europeans as well as migrants from the Majority World (Africans, Caribbean, South Asia and Latin Americans) employing an interdisciplinary approach, their work encompasses the fields of Diaspora Missiology, Practical Theology, World Christianity, Contextual Theology and Pentecostal Studies.

I'll review the book itself sometime in the next few weeks.

If you receive this by email and the video does not appear, you can find it at this link.