FIFTEEN YEARS AND COUNTING

In August 2005, we took our first tentative steps into the blogging world.

Rather than post anything that passes for intelligent or thought-provoking, I simply want to mark the fact that this month, the Kouyanet blog has been running for fifteen years.

What started out as a way of sharing family and ministry news with friends and supporters has morphed into something very different. There are more successful, famous and noteworthy Christian blogs out there, but very few of them have been around as long as Kouyanet. We deserve some sort of award for longevity, if not for the content.

To be honest, turning out blog posts for this long has sometimes been rather stressful. It isn't always easy to come up with something new. Looking back through the archive, it's obvious that sometimes I've posted more or less exactly the same thing a few years apart, just with a different title. Sometimes, I've even repeated the titles!

I'm due to retire in just over four years, so it is far from certain that this blog will hit its 20-year anniversary. In the meantime, the plan is to keep plugging away; advocating for approaches to mission, attitudes and structures that are appropriate for the 21st Century.
