THE LOCAL CHURCH AND GOD'S WORLD WIDE MOVEMENT

Posted on July 20, 2021 by Eddie

Our traditional view of mission is part of the way in which the local church should engage with God's work around the world, but it is not the whole story.
Category: Observations

This is the first in a video/podcast series which is aimed at helping church leaders think through issues related to mission and the world church.

Realising that church leaders are busy people, the aim is to keep the videos short (around five minutes) and accessible. At times, the videos might seem a little obvious - but sometimes the obvious things need saying.

I've entitled the series, the local church and God's world wide mission movement, rather than the local church and mission because I do not believe that what we traditionally understand by the term mission adequately captures what our relationship to the world church should be. Our traditional view of mission is part of the equation, but it is not all of it. The reasons for this are partly spelled out in the first video.

https://youtu.be/0k3qJwU9peg

https://www.kouya.net/upload/WorldwideBiblicalAudio.mp3
Podcast: Play in new window | Download (Duration: 6:30 — 14.9MB) | Embed