LIFE IN THE FAST LANE WILL SURELY MAKE YOU LOSE YOUR MIND...

Posted on December 11, 2008 by Eddie

Category: Observations

Today, my colleague Kent and I went to Dudley (about ninety miles away) to shoot a few minutes of video for a Wycliffe promotion with Saltmine.Â Everything went well and we were soon ready to head home. Unfortunately, there was an accident somewhere on the M40 and we got caught up in a 14 mile queue of traffic. Kent did what any reliable worker would, he got out his laptop and started working. I read a book, and then went for a wander and took some photographs with Sue's phone (we had an early start and I picked up the wrong phone when I left home). We had been hoping to make it back to the office for a meeting at eleven, but we actually arrived late for the centre Christmas lunch at 1.30.

