Brian has just posted some interesting facts and figures from which he draws some excellent conclusions. I particularly liked his second point.

> Western Churches have a two-fold task. Western Christians must (re)embrace mission locally. For too many Western Christians, the mission field is overseas.Todayâ€™s mission field is oneâ€™s workplace, school, shopping centers, and most crucially oneâ€™s next door neighbors. However, given the affluence of Western Christians, it is vital for Westerners to help finance and resource the burgeoning Church around the globe. (read the whole thing).
