PERSECUTION?

Posted on March 3, 2009 by Eddie

Category: Church: UK

Steve Fouch has just written an excellent blog post about the perceived persecution of Christians in the UK.

> ...Secondly, this trivialises the genuine persecution that fellow Christians do experience in many parts of the world. It is a widely quoted statistic that there have been more Christian martyrs in the twentieth century than in all the history of Christianity in the previous 19 centuries. If that is true then the reality of persecution is not trivial. It involves people being imprisoned, tortured and murdered or executed for their faith â€" and there is plenty of documentary evidence that this is happening in many countries of the world even as I write. To suggest what Christians are experiencing in this country goes anywhere near that is, frankly, arrant nonsense. (read more)