My friend and colleague John Hamilton has just started his own blog, with an excellent post...

> *Often I hear young people (and older) talking about the success of a short term mission experience in terms of God answering all their prayers so that what they had planned to do, was amazingly successful. Often I cringe! Not that I donâ€™t think prayer is an essential part of our lives as Christians at home and overseas. Nor because I doubt that God answered their prayers. But because, being ultimately responsible for Wycliffe UKâ€™s summer teams, I know that itâ€™s often the tough experiences, or the growth that comes from dealing with disappointment in the best laid plans not working out as expected, that lead to our summer volunteers learning a lot about themselves and especially about God.
