EPONYMOUS TOWN

Posted on August 25, 2006 by Eddie

Category: Observations

While we were up north visiting family last week, we spent a couple of hours in Marsden, which is not far from where Sue's mum lives. It's the first time I've ever been to Marsden despite the fact I've been visiting the area for years. This is surprising, because Marsden is Sue's family name. As one would expect with that pedigree, it's a very nice place!

This is what Northern towns should look like! Stone houses and heather clad hills just beyond them.

Not a lot of sunshine, but the canal looked good anyway.