LINKS FROM YESTERDAY

There were a number of interesting items in the blogsphere yesterday which I'd like to pass on to you quickly.

There was a good, readable piece on the Trinity published by Tim Chester on Theology Network and a good, if less readable paper on the Christocentrism and the Trinity in Themelios. While on the subject of Themelios, Clayboy asks an awkward question about the journal's editorial policy.

On a lighter note, Christian2Do has picked up on a hilarious story from Lingamish which those who (like me) don't have the time to read Lingamish's recent long posts will thoroughly enjoy.
