I FINALLY ARRIVED

Posted on November 20, 2009 by Eddie

Category: Observations

My travel saga yesterday went on and on. After an hour and a half, we all trooped back to the gate and through the security check, only to be told that there would be another two hour wait, that turned into a four hour wait! We finally took off ten hours after the advertised time. My nice comfy day flight to Nairobi turned out to be a sleepless night flight. Still, I got here. I'll post some pictures of the Brakenhurst conference centre in the next day or two - it really is a beautiful location. Not only that, but it has a good coffee shop (I have a nice decaf cappuccino to hand) and wifi with a fairly fast internet connection. Heather caught me at the back of the meeting room catching up with facebook on my phone.

