WONDERS AND SIGNS

Posted on December 15, 2009 by Eddie

Category: Observations

At some point, I want to find the time to give an insight into what it was we actually went to do in Bangladesh and there is also one more travel news post to give. But for the moment, here are a few of the more interesting signs, notices and such like that we saw on our travels.

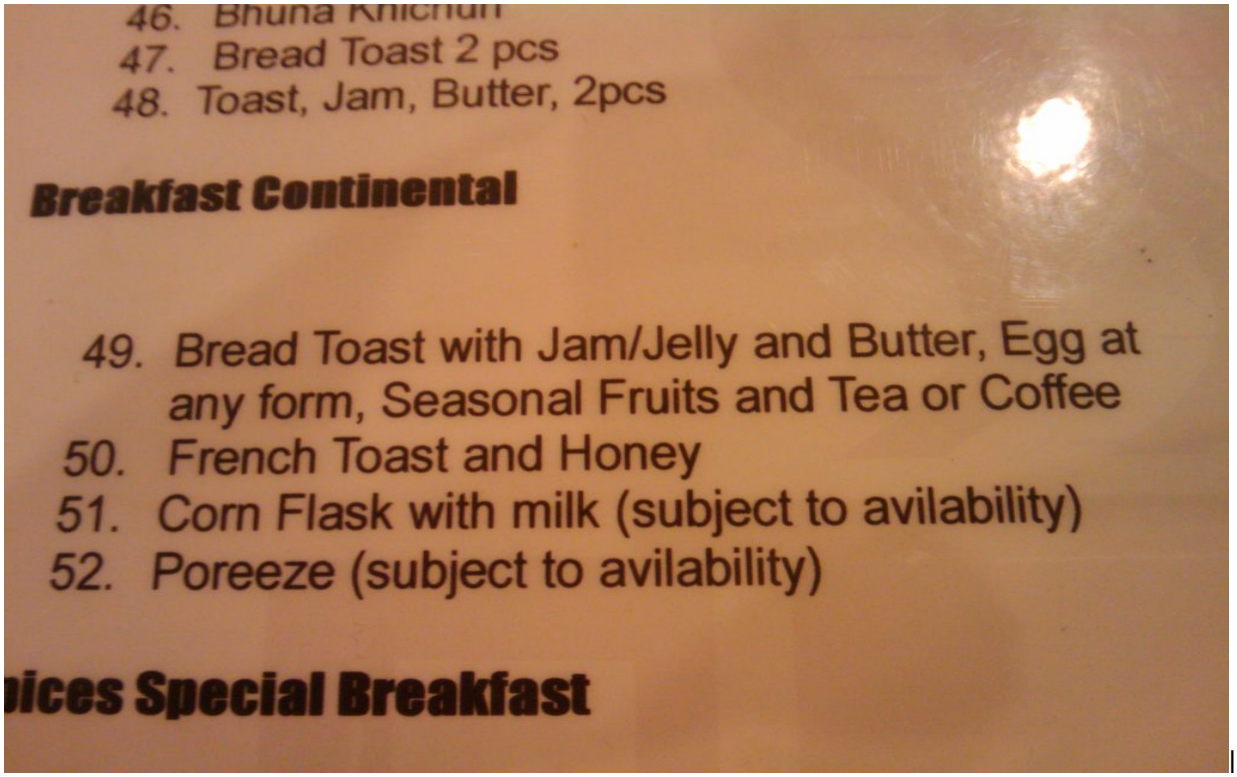

This one wasn't a great encouragement in a lift.

You have to look carefully to see what is not contained in this bottled water (it doesn't tell you what it does contain, though). We did learn later, that there is a lot of arsenic in the ground in the area where we bought this water, so the notice does make sense.

What would you like for breakfast? From a restaurant in Dhaka airport.

I must admit that I didn't expect to see a Christmassy scene like this in Bahrain airport. It just doesn't fit my preconceptions of the Gulf (which just goes to show, how little I know)

