HIS PART OF NAIROBI

Posted on October 3, 2006 by Eddie

Categories: Africa, Computing/Internet, Reviews

Last week in Nairobi, I bumped into fellow missionary Blogger Paul Merril. I've had a sidebar link to Paul's site for ages now, but I wanted to highlight it a little. Paul has the great ability to still see new and interesting things in African life despite having lived in Nairobi for years now. One of the facts of life overseas is that for the first few weeks you notice all sorts of new and interesting things, but after a while they become familiar and you only register them again when a visitor from home points them out. Paul has managed to keep the newcomer's sense of wonder which is brilliant. He posts most week days and generally has a phtograph with a brief word of explanation. Today's photo is a classic!