LESSONS IN HUMILITY!

Posted on December 4, 2006 by Eddie

Categories: Bible Translation, Observations

Well, I try and post interesting and thought provoking material on this website, but the post that has elicited the most response was the one with a video of me falling out of a raft! There is some lesson for life there.

If this wasn't enough, I've just looked back at our statistics for November 2006. For people found this blog using Google searches for Bob Creson - but only two people came to it searching for Eddie Arthur (and I was one of those people, showing someone how to do it). The moral seems to be that if I want to generate lots of traffic to this site, I need to put in the names of lots of leaders in the Bible translation movement - Eddie and Sue Arthur are just not famous enough.

On the other hand, I was very please when my recent post Who Do We Translate the Bible For? was picked up by the Wycliffe Australia Website. I reckon that's worth including a Wycliffe Australia banner again.