FROM PARIS

Posted on January 30, 2007 by Eddie

Category: Observations

Travel is wonderful, it broadens the mind. It also broadens the waist and the bottom becuase you spend ages sitting down and eating too much. Currently, I'm in the lounge in terminal 2C at CDG airport in Paris. I'm waiting for a flight to Niger. I left Southampton three hours ago and I'll be in Niger in about six hours. It's remarkable that you can go so far, so fast. Then again, you don't get to see much on the way - all I'll see of Paris is an airport, and not a very exciting airport at that.