EVERYWHERE TO EVERYWHERE

Posted on January 11, 2011 by Eddie

Categories: Church: World, Mission

This month's Mustard Seed Association, Seed Sampler is on global mission and contains a number of fascinating articles:

> The January 2011 MSA Seed Sampler is out.
>
> The future of missions is global! Not global in the sense of the old bastions of Christian power and missionary efforts from the Western Church, but rather global in the sense that it is now â€œfrom anywhere, to everywhereâ€ . In 2010 the Seed Sampler explored several global trends providing the church with â€œNew Challenges and New Opportunities 2010-2020â€ . All of these global trends impact the future of missions. Whether weâ€™re talking about global power and economic shifts from the North and West to the South and East, the ever-growing global youth culture, turbulent economic times and issues swirling around food and water security and an environment in crisis, or ethnic shifts to a new majority future which, in turn, propels us deeper into issues of pluralism and multiculturalism, there is one clear fact: the mission of God through the church cannot go on as if nothing has changed.
>
> In this edition we look at just a few of these areas and what they mean for missions into the future.
>
> Andy Wade
> Seed Sampler editor

HT Christine Sine