CHURCH ATTENDANCE IN THE UK

Posted on April 3, 2007 by Eddie

Categories: Church: UK, Observations

According to a report on the BBC website one in ten people in the UK attend church on a weekly basis, with 53% of people identifying themselves as Christian. It would be interesting to know how this compares to the number of people who are Muslim and who attend a Mosque regularly. I'd also be interested to see what percentage of people actually take part in what is often presented as the majority religion in Britain - watching football.