FACE TO FAITH

Posted on April 29, 2007 by Sue

Categories: Church: UK, Politics

The Bishop of Durham (Tom Wright) wrote engagingly in the Guardian recently (7 April) about one of his favourite topics: Resurrection. He is brilliant at writing thorough yet very readable theological tomes, but I'm so glad he also manages to find the time to write the occasional thought-provoking newspaper article like this one: Face to Faith.

He's not afraid to say what he thinks about politics and politicians, either. In a more recent article in the Telegraph he is saddened that in Britain "...we do not as a society have a shared world view in which people understand how faith and public life should go together. So it is assumed that if you are a Christian, that's something you do in private or on Sundays..."

Anyway, read him for yourself, and go and see what other articles/lectures/sermons he has written. These can be found on the N T Wright page - 'an unofficial website dedicated to the Bishop of Durham'