MALARIA TRAIN

Posted on August 28, 2007 by Eddie

Category: Africa

When I was in Congo earlier this year I met John James the BBC correspondent in that country. I heard today that he will soon be moving to Ivory Coast to take up a role there - this is good news. John is an excellent journalist as well as being a good guy (and we have lots of friends in common). You can see a selection of what he has done and get another view of development work in Africa by following this link.