Four years ago, the picture of Jason Robinson scoring a try against Australia was one of the iconic views of the Rugby World Cup. A world cup later, Jason doesn't have the speed or the agility that he had when he helped England to win the cup, but he still gives of his best.

It was heartbreaking tonight to see him damage his hamstring and limp off the field knowing we'll probably never see him play again. England got thumped by South Africa tonight - and even though he only played part of the game Jason was still our best player by a long way.

Thanks for the memories, bro. Hope the knee heels soon!
