SUNSHINE

Posted on February 17, 2014 by Eddie

Category: Observations

there are some great things about my job! Here I am in Northern Cambodia, drinking green tea and looking at this view. To say the least it makes a change from the weather in the UK at the moment.

Admittedly the nine hour minibus trip to get here was somewhat tiring and my body insists on trying to sleep when I should be awake and resolutely staying awake in the middle of the night. But hey, what a great place to eat breakfast and catch up with email.

I'm here for a couple of days to visit a colleague and to see the work they are doing. This is a lovely place to visit, but living and working here is a different thing. It's going to be an interesting time.

The local wildlife trying to steal my breakfast.