HERE I GO AGAIN

Posted on June 4, 2014 by Eddie

Category: Observations

What could be more fun on a July morning than running the High Wycombe half-marathon?

How about running the High Wycombe half marathon and collecting donations for Medair's work in Madagascar?

> Madagascar is one of the worldâ€™s most beautiful places yet it is the third most vulnerable country to natural disasters after Bangladesh and India. Frequent cyclones and tropical storms batter the island nation, leaving widespread devastation that impedes the development of this impoverished population. We provide emergency relief when cyclones strike, and during the rest of the year, we help communities gain access to safe drinking water and help establish disaster mitigation activities so that future cyclones cause less damage.Â

It would be a huge encouragement if you were willing to make a donation to support this fantastic cause; so why not go ahead and visit my fundraising page?