KOUYANET READERS

Posted on December 29, 2014 by Eddie

A plea for help from the esteemed and highly intelligent readers of Kouyanet.
Category: Observations

In August 2005, a new section was added to our family website (which was already three years old at that point); a blog. This means that in 2015, this blog will be 10 years old, which is pretty good going in the internet world.

In celebration of this milestone, we'd like to ask you dear readers, whether or not you would be willing to write us a blog post. Each month in 2015 we would like to have a post in which one of our readers tells us a little about themselves and explains why they read Kouyanet. There are a few reasons for this. Firstly, I think it would be interesting and fun to get to know more about the community of people who read this blog. Secondly, it would be quite nice to have someone else doing some writing and saving me some work and perhaps it would be a way of attracting some new readers.

Anyway, if you would be interested in writing something (500 words, max.) please let us know.

For the record, here is that very first post!

> Welcome to this new section of the Kouya Chronicle. The idea of this â€˜blogâ€™ is that it should be easier to update our family news and photographs. It will be interesting to see if it works. Iâ€™ll also try and use this as a place to put some more profound thoughts and ideas, but they will have to wait until I have any. In the meantime, here is the Arthur family on top of Scafell Pikes, the highest mountain in England, in July 05.

You can tell from the shade of red we had all developed that we had picked the hottest day of the year for such a long walk. Not a good idea!
