WELL, I'M HOME AGAIN!

Posted on January 14, 2008 by Eddie

Category: Observations

After a remarkably stress free trek through LomÃ© airport, our flight to Paris took off the best part of an hour late. As usual I didn't manage to sleep much, but I did watch a beautiful film called Earth which was only spoiled by a nauseatingly twee commentary. As we were late into Paris, we had no time to get across the airport to our connection, but Air France organised a driver to whisk us from one terminal to the other and we made the flight with time to spare - which is more than can be said for our luggage. However, on balance, I'm happy that we got home on time and our luggage was a day late - the other way round would have been far more hassle.