MISSIOLOGICAL MYTHS

Posted on August 12, 2005 by Eddie

Category: Reviews

The AIM Summer Magazine has a number of excellent articles including one by John Brand, the UK director. On page ten of the magazine, John looks at the suggestion that the world needs the Western church in order to know God. In a short, but very instructive article, he points out the importance of cross cultural mission to the life of the church.

> I am more and more convinced that we need the rest of the world in order to know God properly. What I mean is this â€“ the more we are exposed to and interact with what God is doing among the peoples of the world, the greater will be our appreciation and experience of the grace and majesty of God.

There are a number of other articles in the magazine that are well worth a read.