AN AMAZING FREE MISSION LIBRARY

Posted on September 9, 2015 by Eddie

A truly remarkable library of mission resources which is available free!
Category: Mission

What has:

- 9,582 Pages?
- 3,388,465 Words?
- 62,846 Paragraphs?
- 333,141 Lines?

The answer (as of September 2015) is the Regnum Edinburgh Centenary Series of books. This series which currently stands at 27 books, but which is still growing, was produced out of the 2010 Edinburgh missionary conference and represents an outstanding piece of work.

There are volumes on all sorts of issues; Mission and Postmodernism, Freedom of Belief and Christian Mission, Holistic Mission,Â Global Diaspora and Mission and the list goes on. The authors and editors are drawn from all parts of Christian tradition and Evangelical Protestants rub shoulders with Catholic and Orthodox Missiologists. It is unlikely that anyone will agree with everything in any one of these volumes, but sometimes we learn more from those we disagree with than we do from those who share our convictions; and there is much to learn from here.

The books have been beautifully produced by Regnum in hardback format with an attractive colour scheme and one of them even has a picture of me on the front (pure accident, I'm sure). However, the publishers are far more keen to get this excellent material into peoples' hands than they are to make money out of it and all of the books are being made available as free pdf downloads (click here and find the download link under the description of each volume - some newer ones can't be downloaded yet). There is really no excuse for you not to browse this collection; if you read Kouyanet, you will find something of interest in the this series.

(And before you ask, no, I haven't read them all.)