A few days ago I said that my impossible dream was to play rugby for England - something I clearly will never do. Andrew Trimble, a student at Belfast Bible College, has done something almost as good as play for England - he plays rugby for Ireland.

This six minute video shows Andrew contrasting the relative importance of his faith and International Rugby. Much though I wish I'd played more rugby when my joints were up to it, I can't argue with Andrew's priorities. HT The Upper Room.

> "I'm glad that God made me good at Rugby because I'm rubbish at everything else... it's great to play rugby for God's Glory. Talking about Jesus excites me more than rugby."
