Hamo has been moonlighting on the Catalytic blog and has come up with a couple of superb posts. Try this for size...

> I believe there is a gap between what we think mission and evangelism is and what they are in reality.
> Often there is this notion of â€˜attempting great things for Godâ€™, â€˜leading many people to Christâ€™, or â€˜taking the city for Jesusâ€™. Iâ€™m sure you have heard these phrases if you have been around church for any length of time.
>
> By comparison, I have rarely heard mission spoken of as loving your neighbour, of living with integrity, or simply falling in line with whatever God asks you to do.
>
> Most of us dream of doing something great. Sorry, let me re-phraseâ€¦ we dream of God doing something great thru usâ€¦ Well that sounds more spiritual doesnâ€™t it?â€¦
>
> But, what if mission was less exciting than it is sometimes portrayed? Read More
