A STORM OF PINGBACKS

Posted on July 29, 2008 by Eddie

Category: Computing/Internet

A few days ago I posted that our web hosting company was not allowing this site to send automatic comments to other sites when I referenced them. The excellent Paul Shaddick commented that I should change hosting company and recommended the one he used (I seem to remember that he was the one who recommended our old company too).Â Anyway, I have now moved over to SiteGround. The move was more or less painless and fairly swift - and they are cheaper than my old bunch too.

One result of the change seems to be that I am sending out pingbacks (automated comments) to every website that I've ever quoted in the past. If you get a load of what looks like spam (but isn't really) - blame me. Sorry.